Step 1: List Out the Channels and Shows You Like To Watch

Make a list of the channels and shows you like to watch on cable, like local news stations, live sports programming, or shows or movie channels. Chances are, you're paying for more channels than you currently use, and that could be costing you an extra $1000 a year!

With your list in hand, you can either call one of our experts or do your own research to discover which streaming platforms are right for you.

YouTube TV gives you access to most live channels, like live sports and news, for example. Other platforms, like Disney+ grant access to limitless movies and tv shows, as well as popular programming from channels like Discovery and ESPN. Whatever shows you like to watch, there's a streaming solution out there for you!

Once you've made your list, you can check streaming prices to see how much you'll save a month compared to your current cable bill. YouTube TV costs about $72.99/month. That's quite a bit less than you're paying for expensive cable! (Especially when you consider it's basically the SAME THING).

Step 2: Get Faster Internet

Next, upgrade to fiber internet. It's super fast and perfect for streaming on multiple devices. Check with local providers to see who offers fiber in your area and pick a plan that fits your needs. A good router will also help keep your connection strong and steady.

At Vero Fiber, we run on a 100% fiber network and don't rely on any outdated technology to deliver the speeds you deserve. Upload and download at symmetrical speeds and use as much data as you like! We don't do data caps, contracts, or hidden fees. With Vero, it's easy to start saving money right away.

Step 3: Set Up Your Streaming Gear

Finally, set up your streaming devices. If you have a smart TV, it likely has built-in apps. If not, you can use devices like Roku, Amazon Fire Stick, or Google Chromecast to start streaming on your desired platforms!

Just plug the device into your TV, connect to Wi-Fi, download your streaming apps, and sign in. Once everything's ready, you can cancel your cable and start enjoying your new setup!

Cutting the cord is simple. With the right steps and a little planning, you can easily switch to streaming and save money.
